1. Introduction

A number of internal and external factors stimulate the need for launching the improved PhD program. First, the College of Languages and Translation offers undergraduate and graduate programs in Translation; therefore, building upon the levels of the existing programs expands the potential for graduate enrollment and simultaneously meets the goals of the university and college as outlined in the mission statement. Second, there is a national need for specialists to design postgraduate teaching curricula and conduct focused research in translation studies in Saudi public and private universities and training centers. Moreover, there is a market demand to increase translation academics, experts and consultants, and finally there is an urgent demand for localizing expertise in translation studies in educational setting and professional environments.

The Doctor of Philosophy in Translation Studies Program is one of the postgraduate programs offered by the College of Languages and Translation at Imam Mohammed Ibn Saud Islamic University, with its lofty message and promising goals centered around teaching, learning, scientific research and community service.

The primary objective of the Doctoral Program in Translation Studies is to prepare students for academic teaching and research in the field. This handbook offers an overview of the policies and requirements of the Doctoral Program and applies to all students currently enrolled in the program. The Doctoral Program will mostly focus on several topics that cover theories, history and pedagogy of translation as an interdisciplinary field. Other topics will include recent technologies in translation.

2. Program Vision, Mission, Goals, and Learning Outcomes

2.1. Program Vision:

A pioneering and sustainable postgraduate program that fosters academic excellence, cutting edge research, robust job prospects, intercultural communication and civic engagement.

2.2. Program Mission:

Equip graduates with a solid foundation of the theoretical and practical aspects of translation studies, geared research skills and cutting-edge technological tools to professionally participate in translation community services.

2.3. Program Goals:

1. To provide students with the opportunity to develop a full command of modern translation theories and models along with their applicability potential.
2. To equip students with an academically accurate interdisciplinary background enhancing their conceptual, analytic, and research competencies in translation teaching, research, and practice.
3. To train students to use cutting-edge electronic tools and software packages available to professional translators and translation researchers (e.g., Computer-Aided Translation tools, Parallel Corpora Concordance)
4. To engage students in national translation projects undertaken for the realization of the KSA 2030 vision in terms of intercultural communication within the framework of national identity and Islamic civilization.
5. To provide students with up-to-date knowledge of research paradigms in translation studies to help them progress to autonomous study in the phase of proposal design and dissertation writing.
6. Foster the development of ethically correct professional behavior among students, equipping them with essential teaching, consultancy, and leadership skills.

Relationship between Program Mission and Goals and the Mission and Goals of the College

The PhD Program vision is in perfect harmony with the vision of the College of Languages and Translation (CLT). Brief in wording as it were, the program vision strictly aligns with the four-item CLT vision:

- Promoting excellence in teaching, learning, and research
- Fostering strategic partnership for internationalization
 - Enriching students' learning experience
 - Providing sustainable community engagement

The CLT Vision above seems to be in agreement with our Program Vision:

A pioneering and sustainable postgraduate program that fosters academic excellence, cutting edge research, robust job prospects, intercultural communication and civic engagement.

There are four focal dimensions in the college mission and goals which are clearly reflected in the Program Mission and Goals: quality education, IT-informed innovative research, Islamic values, and community engagement. The PhD program in translation studies contributes to empowering graduates in the four above-mentioned spheres. In the sphere of quality education, it provides “graduates with the opportunity to develop a full command of modern translation theories and models along with their applicability potential” (see Goal 1). For innovative IT-informed research, the program aspires to “equip students with up-to-date knowledge of research paradigms in translation studies to help them progress to autonomous study in the phase of proposal design and dissertation writing” (see Goal 5). As to IT skills, the program requires that students be trained “to use cutting-edge electronic tools and software packages available to professional translators and translation researchers (e.g. Computer-Aided Translation tools, Parallel Corpora Concordancing)” (see Goal 3). In relation to Islamic values, the Program emphasizes that students should “demonstrate autonomous creativity, intellectual independence and proactive decision-making in complex academic and professional situations inspired by the university corporate culture and Islamic values.” Regarding community engagement, it prepares “students to engage in national translation projects undertaken for the realization of the KSA 2030 vision in terms of intercultural communication within the framework of national identity”(see Goal 4).

In collaboration with the English department, the Quality of Assurance and Development Unit prepares a yearly counseling calendar for students. The counseling program is meant to help students in matters related to students' diverse activities within the university and if need be to respond favorably to their psychological needs. The Unit uses digital means in its counseling mission; making thus relevant information and data available to students with easy and rapid access. Here are some hints about the functioning of the student counselling system in the program:

1. The General Academic Advisory office in both Male and Female Sections handles personal counseling case by case. For example, students requiring in-depth individual counseling are referred to the Student Advising Unit office at male and female campuses, where they can receive social, psychological, and financial assistance.
2. In the student-mentoring unit, a faculty member is assigned to about 3-4 doctoral students as an academic advisor. Academic Advisors meet with the assigned students individually or in groups at least four times during the academic semester. These meetings provide valuable opportunities for information exchange and suggestions as to how the advisors can improve the student's educational experience.
3. Faculty members are also available two times a week to give consultations and advice to students during their office hours. The students may visit instructors in their offices or call them on the phone or other multimedia means. Accommodations for one-on-one consultations are also available if students need them.
4. The Special Needs Unit in the college is responsible for providing accommodations and facilities that fit students of disabilities. Committee members work with special needs students by identifying their individual problems and working on fulfilling his/her academic requirements.
